Sabrient Ratings

Sabrient's Buy/Hold/Sell ratings are based on a combination of dynamic filters that determine which attributes of a stock are most predictive in the prevailing market and which stocks best reflect those attributes but are not yet rewarded.

Sabrient starts with an "extraction" process that uses the best performing filters to identify stocks having certain compelling attributes currently sought by the market. Then, a composite scoring process uses a weighted average of several key scores to quantify the relative likelihood of upside or downside price action. As a result, the Buy/Hold/Sell rating may, in certain cases, seem inconsistent with a simple average of the scores cited in this analysis.

A BUY rating means the stock is expected to outperform its relevant benchmark substantially over the next 6 months. A SELL rating means the stock is expected to underperform its relevant benchmark substantially over the next 6 months. A HOLD rating means the stock is expected to perform in line with its relevant benchmark over the next 6 months.

If a stock is rated HOLD, the investor should review the stock's history of Sabrient ratings to see if it has recently changed to HOLD from BUY or SELL. If so, this indicates one of the following: (1) there has been a significant change in the stock's fundamentals, (2) the stock is already appropriately rewarded or punished by the market, or (3) there simply has been some recent price consolidation that warrants attention. A reading of Sabrient's analysis should identify which it is.

- Best Performing Filters: To determine the likelihood of near-term performance, Sabrient builds and backtests "Smart Filters" to establish which caps, styles and attributes are drawing a premium in today's market. Currently, the three most predictive filters for the relevant segment are:

Cash Flow vs. EPS Filter: The Cash Flow vs. EPS Filter measures short-term cash flow and free cash flow growth against short-term revenue growth and earnings consistency. The filter outperformed its mid-cap benchmark by a substantial margin over the past three months. ATW scores 68.4 for this filter.

Group Momentum Filter: The Group Momentum Filter measures industry group performance in multiple periods with an emphasis on the last three months and serves as a proxy for broader market sentiment toward a group or niche. Backtesting shows that the filter has earned a significant premium to its mid-cap benchmark over the past three months. ATW scores 56.5 for this filter.

Triple Rank Filter: The Triple Rank Filter considers earnings momentum, price momentum and group momentum, along with a factor that measures the flow of money into a stock. The filter has significantly outperformed its mid-cap benchmark during the last 90 days. ATW scores 37.9 for this filter.

A WEEK OF MURK AND FOG

By David Brown, Chief Market Strategist

(January 19, 2010)

Last week brought us murk and fog in an otherwise bright New Year. All style/caps were down for the week, though not drastically. The worst was Small-cap Growth (-1.12%); the best was Large-cap Growth (-0.6%); and the rest crowded between these uninspiring returns. But given the tremendous amount of cash on the sidelines, the market seems unlikely to turn disastrous.

It could have been worse. Alcoa (NYSE: AA), Monsanto (NYSE: MON) and Chevron (NYSE: CVX) disappointed badly early on, although Intel (Nasdaq: INTC) brought in pleasing numbers later in the week. Government statistics were for the most part dismal -- worse-than-expected numbers for trade balance (-36.4 B), initial job claims (+11,000 to 444,000) and retail sales (-0.3%). Even consumer sentiment was poor (flat, actually, at 72.8 vs. December's final 72.5), probably a reflection of the other disappointing statistics. Only the consumer price index (CPI) was encouraging, increasing just 0.1% in December, after a 0.4% rise in November. Although Europe is beginning to struggle with inflation, the U.S. isn't having that problem yet.

This morning's announcement by Citigroup (NYSE: C) was worse than ugly, but it met expectations and still closed higher. IBM (NYSE: IBM) beat estimates but sold off a bit afterhours. Google (Nasdaq: GOOG) reports on Thursday. It must be the glow of these giants, plus all that money on the sidelines, that has the market doing so well, even as it reflects on last week's mess. Indeed, the S&P 500 closed at a new 52-week high today, with the Dow and the Nasdaq closing in on theirs. A bit surprising is that all of today's positive activity is in spite of a stronger dollar. Perhaps part of the market's resilience is due to several major M&A events, highlighted by Tyco's (NYSE: TEL) purchase of Brinks (NYSE: BCO). I guess if you can't rob the truck, just buy it.

Our sector outlook for last week had Healthcare, Consumer Staples, and Utilities in the top 5, and it was close to spot on as those three sectors were three of the only four sectors positive for the week. Materials, as predicted in our January 8th SectorCast, brought up the bottom last week, with Energy and Financials not much better.

This week, the Sabrient outlook seems best for Telecom, Healthcare and Utilities and worst for Materials, Industrials and Financials. As you can see from the SectorCast table, the Financials sector has fallen to the bottom once again.

Caution remains the word of the day, although the significant cash on the sidelines seems unlikely to let the market slip too much, barring any unforeseen disaster.

About Sabrient

Sabrient Systems is an independent research firm providing statistical analysis of a company's fundamental data to investment professionals. We use a computer-driven, quantitative methodology to identify stocks that appear poised to outperform or underperform the market.

The Sabrient methodology was developed by an experienced research team led by David Brown, a former NASA scientist and retired CEO of Telescan and designer of its premier stock search program, ProSearch. The research team employs a scientific approach to the creation and testing of multi-factor filters. Each filter targets a key area of traditional stock analysis, including value, growth, momentum, fundamentals, earnings, balance sheet, and group strength. Using an adaptive process, filters are continually tested and monitored to ensure that only the best performing filters are at work.

Sabrient's ratings begin with an extraction process in which each of the few best-performing filters scans the universe of equities to identify stocks having certain compelling attributes sought, but not sufficiently rewarded, by the current market. Then, a composite scoring system employs a broader set of "weighting" filters to rank the extracted stocks. To support individual investors, Sabrient uses the same sophisticated methodology to provide individual stock reports on a universe of approximately 5,600 stocks.

Sabrient regularly tests the performance of its stock selections, using its primary list of published rankings and statistical techniques it believes appropriate. These recommendations have consistently outperformed relevant benchmarks across a broad range of investing styles, market caps, time frames and market conditions, demonstrating the robustness of Sabrient's proprietary methodology. While past performance is no guarantee of future results, Sabrient believes it can maintain its strong performance through its rigorous, scientific approach to filter construction and ongoing backtesting within a dynamic and adaptive composite scoring system.
